Sure, you've at least heard of cabbage soup, Russian ballet and Matryoshka dolls — those colorful wooden figures that can be pulled apart to reveal smaller dolls inside. But that's just surface stuff. The fifth annual Russian Heritage Festival delivers a fuller understanding of how diverse the regions and cultures from the former Soviet Union really are Sunday, from noon to 5 p.m. at Snug Harbor Cultural Center, 1000 Richmond Terr. Admission is free. The day of performances, Russian foods and crafts is part of the month-long, citywide festival.
